Hazel has watched a documentary about the Moai statues and now she's sharing what she's learned.

Hazel : Have you seen pictures of the Moai statues, on Easter Island?

Celia : Yes, I think I have seen a few. Amazing how the islanders carved those huge stones like that. And I must confess, when I see those statues that seem to gaze into the distance, I feel uneasy.

Hazel : Really? Then you would probably feel very uncomfortable, surrounded by those figures. Did you know that there were almost 900 statues carved and transported? Unfortunately though, the people who lived on that island started taking them apart in the middle of some conflicts or wars between themselves.

Celia : That sounds rather pointless. Why would you destroy something you've worked for with blood, sweat and tears?

Hazel : Apparently these statues represent their ancestors, which they worshipped. They believed their ancestors transmitted them power and prosperity through these statues. Whenever there was a problem, they would carve more statues to help them get rid of it. So rivalry settled between the tribes.

Celia : I see, it sort of makes more sense now. But who were these tribes?

Hazel : Not much information is known. There are theories about where they came from, and how they arrived to such a remote island. But it's difficult to say for sure, and the only written texts found on the island are in a language that no one can read now.

Celia : Quite a mystery...But one thing is for sure, they left an incredible cultural legacy!

Hazel : I agree! I hope I can get the chance to see it with my own eyes one day!
